

About At-Home Pet Euthanasia:

“Peaceful Passing” is a special service offered by Animal Care Hospital that provides at-home pet euthanasia in the privacy of one's home. We believe many pet owners would prefer to have their pet's final moments be at home where family can be by their side and everything is familiar to them. At-home euthanasia can be one of the greatest final gifts we give to our pets.

At-home euthanasia allows you to grieve and spend time with your pet in the privacy of your own home according to your schedule. We will do our best to accommodate your schedule so that you can be there to surround him/her with love without distractions.

The Process:

You should be well informed before making the decision to euthanize and this is best done through a consultation with your regular veterinarian.

When the decision to have your pet euthanized in your home is made, we will come to your home at the predetermined time, to assist you with providing a peaceful passing for your pet. We will help you with this most difficult decision by offering our expertise and support during every step of the process.

“Saying Goodbye At Home”

Should I Be Present?

This is a personal decision. On one hand, you probably do not want your pet to be alone with strangers in the final moments but on the other hand you may not be up to watching your pet's death. Every owner wants to think of euthanasia as a gentle slipping into death, much like falling asleep. In reality, the pet will not close his or her eyes, and there may be a final twitch, gasp, or even urination. We can administer a sedative prior to euthanizing to help facilitate a smooth passing. The owner should be aware that this may make their pet quite sedate and, therefore, unresponsive to their voice and touch.

The issue of children being present is a personal one and the above information should be considered.

Are there options for urns if I decide on private cremation?

Yes. We would be happy to discuss all of the options for containing the remains with you. There is a wide assortment of choices at different price points.
